Kenner's Appeal to Save a Brand From the Burning.

RICH FOOD FOR REFLECTION

A Sweeping Arrangement of the Hydra-Headed Monster Known to the World as Republicanism.

To the Editor of the HERALD:

The article by "Excellence" in Wednesday's HERALD is one demanding attention from those who have the welfare of our territory at heart. It voices a sentiment which is apt to grow and take deeper and deeper root if the causes which brought it forth are not checked at once and finally removed altogether. It is a deplorable fact that sufficient attention has not been bestowed upon the task of bringing some of our young men into the broad and straight avenue leading to the republicanism in local as well as national affairs, while on the other hand the Republican swabbers, tract-distributors and general solicitors of high and low degree are constantly on the alert. That they are in places capturing more of those of our youth who have hitherto given no special attention to politics than we are doing, is owing principally to that state of affairs and partly to the fact that the newly-arrived rabble is more attracted by the glittering jewels, the painted cheeks and the meretricious arts of the women of the town than by the unadorned attire and modest demeanor of the plain but virtuous and honest girl who makes no effort to elicit his admiration. He is accustomed to the latter class and unless their virtues and sterling qualities are set in contrast with those of the brazen being spoken of by those who know and knowing can tell in an impressive and instructive manner, he will go on in his admiration for the harlot until chastity and purity have become his enemy.

You will please note that I do not charge your correspondent, even by implication, with being a rustic and unused to the arts of the political metropolis; far from it. His letter shows him to be a keen observer and one who has observed to learn. His disposition to scale the wall of propriety and alight in the Republican camp, as fore-shadowed in his closing paragraph, is due to another reason than lack of experience, and would seem to be a species of pique created by the neglect or assumed neglect of certain members of a Democratic organization, who may or may not be guilty of what he charges. The novice is the one usually captured on the wrong side by reason of sufficient inducements not being offered on the right one; but your correspondent seems to want revenge for a slight which he claims has been put upon him and others by the members of the club in other words, he would do wrong himself in order to rebuke wrong in others. That is a bad policy, and let us hope he will reconsider before acting definitely.

Suppose that what he says regarding the action of the Democratic club here is correct and timely, what then? Undoubtedly he understands that a few members of the club are not the club itself, nor is the club the party. Democracy is too decidedly broad-gauge in its tendencies and functions to be narrowed down to the proportions of a cotillion, or for its officers to be manipulated and conducted by a few men, no matter how capable and zealous in the cause. This understanding, why should he and others who may be dissatisfied with it off at a tangent and seek satisfaction in the ranks of the common enemy? It is not right, and there can be no satisfactory outcome to such a policy. The Republican soldier—a general—in the colonial army during the revolution, fancied that he was not receiving all the prominence and attention which his meritorious services entitled him to, and being flattered by the enemy and tempted with their gold, he permitted his weakness to overcome his sense of duty and he went over to them. His name was Benedict Arnold, and I need not refer to his career subsequently to that. No; if our friend seriously thinks of joining hands with the Republicans, let us not hope it will be as the result of a clever conviction that it is the better of the two national organizations, nor because he and other young men have not received the attention nor the treatment to which they were entitled at the hands of some few of our party who have not, at times, had sufficient stamina to resist the pressure and at others have not been placed in such circumstances as would justify them in being as catholic in policy and comprehensive in action as they are in their demands. Besides, it should be considered that the establishment of national politics in this territory is a question involving many features that are of necessity of a national character. The separate field of political action has been with it the necessity for new measures, the forming of new associations and the acquisition of new friendships. The first step has been taken; the Democratic club has spoken out in no uncertain terms and its platform of principles breathes forth so much of patriotism, of justice and of equity as to be a real and useful thing. The secession from former political affiliations is accomplished, and that of assimilation with the new conditions will undoubtedly proceed as a matter of course. At once it is a mighty revolution that is going on, and it ought to move deliberately backward. Give the club reasonable time and see if they do not realize our dearest hopes as regards the political situation hereabouts. If they do not, it will then be time enough to talk about non-affiliation; but to those whose minds are made up and who will have no patting in a double sense with anything as their rule of conduct, it will not even then be time to apostasize from Democracy and go over to the arch-opponent of our nation and our territory—the Republican party.

If the correspondence is moving on the plan suggested—the superiority of the Republican party as to principles—the one thing suggested now is to ask him once more to pause and consider. There is really and actually not a point of good principle in the Republican party that is not over-matched and over-shadowed by the Democratic party. Republicanism is the nearest thing to monarchical power permitted or rendered possible by our institutions. Its cardinal feature is a strong central power growing stronger as the times advance and our people and industries multiply. The natural tendency of such government is the support and encouragement of huge monopolies, trusts and combinations, each patterned after and deriving substance from the superior power under which it came into existence. The logical sequence of a national power thus aimed, controlled and directed, working hand-in-hand with its satellites of a lesser grade and a personal character has been made manifest so often that to give them a showing here and now would be a work of the merest supererogation. Jay Gould, with his over-balanced wealth, whose business establishment is an superlative in its kind, is to some extent a regulator of it, not rival to the government so far as financial affairs are concerned, is only one instance out of many of how the Republican party, by its mischievous policy encourages the aggregation of wealth, where aggregation is not to further purely private and partisan ends. The cases of Carnegie, Rockefeller, and many others who have climbed up to colossal fortunes through the inequities of a prohibitory tariff, are other instances in point, none of which related to an alarming extent under Democratic rule. Undoubtedly in any country and with any form of government, some—the few—will be wealthier than others, some will be millionaires and some paupers, no matter how wise and beneficent the laws; but in no country under the sun with popular institutions, from the dawn of civilization down to the present time, has history ever recorded the growth of so many actual rivals to the government, their enormous and utterly disproportionate wealth, within so short a time as has been the case under the rule of the Republican party. In no nation controlled, in theory at least, by the popular voice, have such extremes of wealth and poverty prevailed as have obtained in the United States during the present generation—all brought about during the ascendancy of the Republican party. In no country on whose face is indelibly stamped by the great Author the lineaments of internal resources innumerable and inexhaustible, has so much discontent among the toilers prevailed or so much dissatisfaction with the powers that be exist—mainly conceived and brought forth during the time that the Republican party has consorted with the government. In no other place on earth would a party having control of public affairs dare to tax its subjects for importing articles of necessity not produced at home, nor would it have the audacity to burden the laborer and consumer with an additional liability for seeking the cheapest markets in which to purchase the necessities of life. There is no argument like existing facts, and the foregoing are but a few out of many hundreds of facts going to show the chief point presented above—that the Republican party is subversive to popular government; that in order to fortify itself it protects and upholds the pampered creatures which its own enormities have produced, while utterly neglecting and ignoring the bone and sinew of the land; that it has acted the part of a robber and extortioner to those entitled to protection, by claiming that an increase in the prices of necessities to consumers was a benefit to all because sheltering us from an imaginary pauper system abroad.

The Republican party has put innocent men and women, and even lunatics, to death, for political effect; it has upheld the enforced prostitution of women; and the wholesale incarceration of those who did not sympathize with it, for the same reason. It has made a greater number of Democrats in fighting battles for the union and arrogantly claimed all the credit and honor for the victories while shirking all responsibility for the defeats; it has packed the courts, overriden the laws and made a solemn mockery of justice; it has stolen office, from the Presidency of the country down to the constable of a precinct wherever and whenever it could conjure up the shadow of a pretext; it has repudiated treaties made by Democratic representatives and used those same treaties when it came into power, then calling the attention of the world to its superior diplomacy; it practically destroyed our navy, our commerce and our prestige on the seas; it has enacted more partisan legislation than all its predecessors combined; it has sought to subjugate all the southern states to negro control, and would if it were not for the condition with bayonets. Wherein is the superiority of such a party over any reasonable combination that could be or has been made?

Let us hope your correspondent will not act hastily in the premises. Let him wait a short time and with additional thought will surely reach the decision that his choice was not hastily made, no matter what that choice may be.

S. A. KENNER.

There is But One Issue.

To the Editor of THE HERALD:

I confess to no little pain after having read "An Open Letter" in your issue of Wednesday. It was evidently written by a young resident of Utah who has been in bad political company of late. How any such a one should so far descend to allow his sympathy to extend to the Republican horde before they have placed themselves on the right side of the most important of all questions in Utah—a disfranchisement—is something unexplainable. Doesn't the young man know that the party he now proposes to join will disfranchise him if it ever gets into power in this territory—unless it makes a change for the better, which is hardly to be expected? I happen to know the young man in question; I happen to know that he is a Mormon, or his parents are, and that his sympathies to a certain extent, at least, must tend that way. Doesn't he know that the Struggle bill—the most infamous proposition ever laid before a Congress—was engineered by the very men he is now anxious to serve? Doesn't he know, if these efforts had been successful, that to-day he would, although born and raised in this country, have been robbed of his vote, and placed in as servile and abject a position as were the negroes of the south before the war of the rebellion?

If he does not, then he has not been the observer that he should have been; and yet he looks the part of a man who has been raised to strike him.

Out upon it! Let no member of the body known as Young Utah give even the slightest aid or encouragement to the Republican party, until it has come out flat-footed on the disfranchisement question, as have the Democrats. If, when the Republicans have done this, his moral culture is so badly warped as to desire an alliance with a party that once stole a presidential election, and would do it again to-morrow if the chances were ripe, then it is time to think about it, and not do it.

I can conceive of no worse species of humiliation and degradation than for Young Utah's men to be seen in the ranks of the Republican horde, who have tried time and time again, and who are even now whetting their knives to cut the political throats of every young man who ever had any connection with the Mormon church—either near or remote.

Let the slogan go forth. "The tariff cuts but little figure; the salt question is nothing." The question of disfranchisement is the one real issue between the political parties in Utah.

If the Republican party comes into existence here without an anti-disfranchisement plank in its platform, for the sake of your father, your brothers and your friends, scotch it as you would a rattlesnake in the cotton wilds.

Changing Defeat to Victory. The genius of Sheridan at Winchester changed defeat to victory. So when feeble adversaries in the shape of inefficient remedies fail to stay the progress of that obstinate and malignant foe, malaria, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters turns the tide—drives the enemy back. Nothing in materia medica, or out of it, compares with this as an opulent of every form of malarial disease. Chills and fever, dumbague, bilious remittent and ague make—makers, not one and all are exterminated by the Bitters. To take a course of the great preparative advances of the malarial season, is to buckle on, as it were, an armor of proof which defies attack. So fortified, so protected, you shall be fearless. Remember, too, that the Bitters is an eradicator of liver complaints, constipation, rheumatism, kidney complaints and dyspepsia.

WHAT CAME OF A FRIENDLY SUGGESTION.

Wm. Douglas of Payson was long unit for business; carried his life like a burden on his back; aches and liver complaints, caused by impure blood, were the enemies. One day his friend, Mr. Cleghorn, superintendent Z. C. M. I. Drug Department, said, "Don't you try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy of Rochester, N. Y.?" He did so, and now Mr. Douglas is as sound as the silver dollar with which he bought the Favorite. All our druggists keep Favorite Remedy now.

GOLDSMITH & CO.'S MAMMOTH CLOTHING HOUSE

Has become one of the features of Salt Lake City, so long has it been established and so entirely has it fulfilled its undertaking, and not only do the dwellers in this city, but all visitors to the metropolis profit by the experience of such well-known caterers. The etiquette of clothing is continually changing in certain matters of detail, and a reliable guide of what may and what may not be worn under certain circumstances is almost necessary. That guide is to be found here, an authority on everything from a Child's Kilt Suit to a Gentleman's Full Dress Suit. Aside from this specialty there are thousands of customers who deal habitually with Goldsmith & Co. without wearing full dress suits. This being the house in the northwest where may be seen the masterpiece of Poole and other artists of London, through the subdued tints, it is scarcely to be wondered at what a certain attraction impels many thither who only from choice invest themselves in Goldsmith & Co.'s beautiful line of Spring Overcoats, Box Coats, Suits, Furnishing Wear. Hats, Caps and Shoes are here to be found in every tasteful guise. Materials from the richest to the cheapest are at hand, and tailors famed for their fit and cut are kept upon the premises; it is always possible to choose from their immense stock, style of make and mode of finish. The assortment is perhaps the largest and most certainly the richest in Salt Lake city, ranging, as it does, from the most elaborate of Dress Suit to the simplest and plainest Business Tailor-made Suit. Also a fine line of the Mother's Friend Shirt Waists.
